

CO-PRESIDENT'S REPORT

BY: Bonnie A. Jacobs, Ph.D.

It has been a few months since the last newsletter and much has happened in the country and LAGPA. In San Francisco, marriage licenses were issued to Gay and Lesbian couples and the first marriages between same gender partners were performed. Soon thereafter, marriage licenses were issued in New Paltz, New York, Albuquerque, New Mexico and cities in other states. Though the courts have placed an injunction on the issuance of new same-sex couple marriage licenses, hundreds of Gay and Lesbian couples are now married and the courts will have to look into the faces of real people, who love each other, before deciding on the legality of the issue. George W. Bush's bigotry and desire to disenfranchise a specific group of people became undeniably clear when he stated he would support a constitutional amendment to ban same gender marriages.

For a United States President to suggest the proposal of an amendment to the Constitution that would clearly deny rights to a specific group of US Citizens is an historic move. It appears that those who oppose Gay/Lesbian marriages are coming from a place of fear related to a threat to their sense of self and ego strength. Though there are still other disenfranchised groups of people living within the United States and there have been many atrocities committed against specific groups in U.S. history, fueling and inflaming the desire to perpetrate segregation and hatred should not be the road taken by the person sworn to uphold the Constitutional principles of "equality and justice for all." Further, to call judges who are actually interpreting and adhering to the laws as written "rogues" undermines the judicial system under which we live. It will be interesting to see how this plays out in the courts and what impact it has on the November elections.

Back in LAGPA's little corner of the country, we have had some Board, Executive Committee and Conference Committee changes. Due to a number of personal difficulties, Claudia Bramlett had to resign as Treasurer, Board Member and Conference Committee Chair. Claudia had been LAGPA treasurer for two years, and served on the board and a number of committees. Thank you Claudia for all you contributed. You will be missed and we hope you will be back when things calm down. Our new treasurer is Dr. Paula Newman. In addition to her Psy.D., Paula has a degree in business and has agreed to take on the daunting task of managing our finances. Dr. Harry Drasin has stepped in to help Bill Mochon co-chair the Conference Committee. Claudia's departure has left us with another hole in the Board and we need three female and three male Board members.

The Board has been hard at work organizing and presenting CEU seminars, deciding whom to honor at this year's annual awards and planning the annual conference. I would like to thank all of the board members for their tireless efforts on these projects. I am particularly thankful to Joni Lavick for chairing the Awards Committee and Stuart Altschuler for assisting her. The Board had great difficulty choosing among the deserving nominees that Joni and Stuart presented. Drs. Bill Mochon and Harry Drasin have been hard at work contacting possible conference presenters, wading through proposals and managing to pull together a fabulous group of speakers for the conference.

It is my honor to announce that Drs. Vallerie Coleman and Paul Oberon are this year's recipients of the LAGPA Community Service Awards. Val and Paul have made significant contributions to the GLBT Community as therapists. I am also thrilled to announce that the Board has voted to present a special Lifetime Achievement Award to State Senator Sheila Kuehl. Senator Kuehl has made significant contributions in the advancement of mental healthcare legislation, GLBT issues and legal issues for a very long time. She has also been the keynote speaker at the Annual LAGPA convention twice. She is a tireless advocate whom we felt had not yet received the recognition she deserves. We hope to correct this somewhat at the awards ceremony on September 18, 2004 at 7 PM. (See flyer in this issue.)

Soon you will all be receiving conference materials and membership/renewal forms. The membership year runs from July 1 to June 30. The organization cannot exist without a dues paying membership, support of LAGPA events and people willing to serve on the Board or work on committees. We are also always looking for people who would be willing to present at CEU seminars on topics of importance to psychotherapists and the GLBT community. If you are currently a member, thank you and please renew as soon as possible. If you have friends who are therapists or therapy students please urge them to join and attend the conference and CEU events. If you would like to present at a CEU seminar, please contact Bill Mochon, Psy.D. at mochonpsyd@aol.com.

Finally, the database on our web site should now reflect all of the current information we have for you. If you have requested to be listed in the web site directory, please check your information and email me if there are errors, changes or additions. Please remember web space is limited and we cannot list all of your activities, affiliations or credentials. Pick what you would like to list based its importance to you.

I look forward to seeing, hopefully, all of you at the Annual Conference. •

CYBERSEX CEU SEMINAR

BY: Michael Porte, MFT

The Board would like to thank Doug Braun-Harvey, MFT for presenting an interesting and enlightening CEU seminar on March 12, 2004 entitled "Culturally Relevant Assessment and Treatment for Gay Men's Online Sexual Activity." Over 25 people took part in the seminar which consisted of a lecture, Q&A and discussion. Doug has been a practicing therapist in the San Diego Gay and Lesbian Community for over 20 years, and is regarded as an expert in the treatment of sexual dependency and addiction.

Mr. Braun-Harvey initially outlined some elements of sexual health which include:

- The capacity to enjoy and control sexual and reproductive behavior in accordance with a social and personal ethics
- Freedom from factors that inhibit sexual response and sexual relationships, including fear, shame, guilt, false beliefs, and other psychological influences

Mr. Braun-Harvey stressed the need for therapists to have a positive approach to human sexuality and help clients integrate the somatic, emotional, intellectual and social aspects of sexuality into their personalities and daily lives. He defined "sexual dependency" as sexual behaviors that involve problems of sexual control, and excessive, intrusive sexual preoccupation leading to psychological distress. Any sexual behavior can become a source of harmful dependence. Sexual dependency includes a ritualistic, repetitive, rigid set of behaviors that require professional treatment and compassionate understanding from well-informed clinicians.

Mr. Braun-Harvey cited the use of the Internet as an important cultural/social phenomenon for all therapists to be aware of

as it has enabled the general public to have easy access to sexually related products, services and encounters. Gay and bisexual men are especially skillful and likely to use the Internet for a variety of such purposes. He made several points about gay men and the Internet, notably:

- Gay men access the internet at a higher frequency and a higher proportion than most any other demographic group.
- Gay men with access to the internet will most likely express some aspect of their sexuality via online sexual activity.
- The more disenfranchised the sexual interest, the more advantages the internet may have for making contact with persons of similar interest.

Mr. Braun-Harvey said psychotherapists working with gay men must have knowledge of the world of online sexual behavior as well as specific online behavior patterns commonly present in the lives of gay men. Assessment of gay men's online activity is the all-important first step for therapists. In order to distinguish the type of activity a therapist must ask specific and detailed questions that elicit the specific details of the type of online activity in which the client engages. Moreover, the therapist must explore the meaning and purpose the online activity has for the client. The audience was cautioned to be respectful, reasonable and thoughtful in questioning clients about their online sexual behavior. A premature focus on the client's online sexual behavior being problematic, excessive or out-of-control may be misperceived by the client as a sex negative attitude about on-line sexual behavior.

PSYCHOANALYTIC CASE STUDY WITH A GAY COUPLE SEMINAR

BY: David Burke, Psy.D.

On Friday evening, February 6, Jim Green, Ph.D., Psy.D., gave an engaging presentation as part of LAGPA's continuing education series. He spoke about his long-term, psychoanalytic therapy with a gay male couple, raising a number of interesting issues and stimulating a lively discussion among the, approximately, 30 people in attendance. Dr. Green is a Training and Supervising Analyst and a graduate of the Institute of Contemporary Psychoanalysis and he works primarily from an Intersubjective orientation.

Dr. Green presented material from his sessions with this couple and discussed his understanding of the unconscious dynamics at play in their interactions. It was refreshing to hear Dr. Green openly discuss his countertransference reactions in working with the couple and how these reactions guide him in his interventions. The group discussion lasted almost 45 minutes following Dr. Green's presentation. Everyone in the room appeared to have something to say. Issues/ questions raised by the seminar attendees included the extent to which therapy with gay male couples was different from work with other couples, how issues of transference and countertransference impacted therapy and how the clients' experiences in their own families of origin seemed to influence their relationship, in both adaptive and maladaptive ways. There was also quite a bit of discussion about the couple's agreement to allow sex outside of the relationship.

This was the second seminar Dr. Green has given for LAGPA. The LAGPA board would like to thank Dr. Green for his consistently thoughtful and stimulating presentations.

Dr. Green can be reached at 310-820-5584. •

Consider a HYPNOTHERAPY referral for your clients.

The Subconscious Mind is a powerful influence on behavior, thought and emotion. Hypnotherapy is a powerful tool for accessing the Subconscious and changing old ways of reacting. This offers clients new behavioral options and exciting life changes!

How could this modality fit into your treatment plan?

Professional hypnotherapy can be a valuable adjunct to the work you do with your clients—or perhaps the right alternative to traditional psychotherapy.

Hypnotherapy may be the more appropriate treatment choice for clients with basic self-improvement goals such as habit control, stress management or anxieties and fears which do not meet DSM-IV criteria for anxiety disorders or phobias.
